Happenings in and Around Frank

Inspector P. C. H. Primrose, of the R. N. W. M. P., spent Saturday and Sunday in town.

W. M. Campbell came up from Macleod on Saturday and returned on Sunday evening.

Judge Crawford was up from Macleod on Thursday and conducted district court here on that day.

H. Stirling came up from Spokane on Sunday and is registered at the Rocky Mountain Sanatorium.

The Ladies' Aid of Knox Methodist church intend giving a pie social in the church on Monday evening next.

J. Lebau and F. Berley, both of Cranbrook, came to town on Monday noon and are spending a few days taking baths at the sulphur springs.

C. F. Harris came up from Macleod on Friday last and addressed the electors on the benefits of reciprocity in the Miners' hall in the evening. He is registered at the Sanatorium.

Anniversary services will be held in the Methodist church here on Sunday next. Rev. W. H. Irwin, of Bellevue, will conduct the services and will preach both morning and evening. Special music is being provided for the occasion.

T. H. Bohart, of Wardner, B. C., who is taking baths at the Rocky Mountain Sanatorium as treatment for rheumatism, is improving and finds the sulphur water, which has made Frank famous, to be of a very high quality and to give beneficial effects.

Frank is booming these days if one is to judge by the building activity. Quite a number of neat cottages have just been completed and many more are under construction. The latest to turn their hands in that direction are Frank Renacco and August Vrbnarg who are erecting a cottage each on 8th Street.

The large and ever growing army of game bird hunters will find ample variety in stories dealing with their favorite recreation in September issue of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor Limited, Woodstock, Ontario. From Newfoundland to British Columbia is a wide range and all is included in this one number, the difference in the sport enjoyed in various Provinces being pleasantly conveyed in a series of stories dealing with actual occurrences in the field.

As usually treated, a sprained ankle will disable a man for three or four weeks, but by applying Chamberlain's Liniment freely as soon as the injury is received, and observing the directions with each bottle, a cure can be effected in from two to four hours. For sale by all dealers.

"What do You Think of the Plan?"

Bourassa—the ally of Mr. Borden, upon whose supposed ability to cut Sir Wilfrid's throat the whole hope of Conservative victory rests—followed Sir Wilfrid Laurier, course at the Imperial Conference, last summer, with a jealous eye, and as occasion offered, belittled and misrepresented the part he played there. The complimentary references to Sir Wilfrid as the doyen of the Conference and the greatest figure among the overseas statesmen were particularly displeasing to Bour-

Dr. Warnock, the Liberal Standard Bearer, to the Electors of the Federal District of Macleod

GENTLEMEN—

Having accepted nomination as the Liberal standard bearer in the forthcoming election, and being an enthusiastic believer in the benefits to be derived from the reciprocity pact with the United States, I desire to place before you a few reasons why the cause I support should receive your endorsement at the polls.

In December, 1910, the farmers of Canada sent a large delegation to Ottawa to lay before the government their demands relative to immediate measures for the benefit of the farming interests, and a reciprocal agreement with the United States was one of the most important measures suggested.

About the same time the United States government sent representatives to Ottawa and announced that they were prepared to enter into negotiations with a view to arrange a reciprocal trade agreement, with the result that the reciprocity pact now before the people of Canada was reached and the approaching election is a referendum as to whether that agreement shall or shall not become law.

It is a well known fact that farm products, wheat, barley, oats, hay, flax, cattle and horse manure, meet better prices in the United States markets than are obtainable in Canada and with the duty removed you will have free access to the markets of the south and reap the advantage of higher prices for your products.

Access, duty free, to a new market of eleven million people, is what this reciprocity trade agreement means and it is for the farmer to say whether he will accept or decline the offer put before him by the government. The reciprocity agreement also provides for a considerable reduction on the duty of agricultural implements and this will enable the farmer to save money on his purchases of the many farm implements.

As a member of the United Farmers Association of Alberta I endorse the platform of that organization, and if sent to Ottawa as your representative I shall do everything in my power to bring about a further substantial reduction of the duty on agricultural implements at the earliest possible date.

The farmers of Canada through a delegation sent to Ottawa asked for reciprocity and those of you who follow the debate in the House know that but for the opposition of the Conservative party, reciprocity would now be in force and we should be getting the benefit. If you vote for the Liberal party and return that party to power you will have the agreement ratified just as soon as the parliament can be re-assembled.

As has been already pointed out, the Conservative party is opposed to this measure and by supporting their candidate you are assisting to elect as; and on July 13, in his own paper, Le Devoir, in an article over his own signature, he proceeded to set forth his opinion of Laurier, the Imperialist. And this is what he said, in part:

"Yes the Nestor of the Imperial Conference, the Canadian Washington, found it right and good that 50,000 men should be massacred, millions of farms to be burnt and ravaged, peaceful homes to be pillaged, women to be outraged, and little children to be shut up in pestilential camps, where they died like flies."

"English and Afrikaner soldiers who fell on the velvet for the glory of Chamberlain, women who died from shame or misery for the glorification of Laurier, children whose entrails have dried up in the concentration camps for the honor of the Empire. What do you think of the man?"

that party to power and therefore assisting to destroy the reciprocal agreement.

The powerful industrial and financial interests of the east are opposed to the agreement and if the Conservatives get into power these interests will dictate the policy of that party and tariff reduction will be impossible. Reciprocity also means much to the consumers of Canada and is worthy of their support. The fact that many food stuffs can be imported free of duty from the United States should appeal to the consumers of this country who are anxious to see the cost of living reduced.

The reciprocal agreement will give a tremendous stimulus to the development of the large coal areas lying along the mountains. The removal of the duty on coke will enable Alberta coke to compete successfully with Pennsylvania coke in the markets of the great smelting centres of the United States and the result will be a largely increased output of our coal companies. New coal mining towns will spring up in these coalfields and new home markets for farm products. Railways will be induced to come in from the south affording us better transportation facilities.

One of the arguments advanced by the Conservative party against the pact is that better trade relations with the United States will tend to make us disloyal to Britain and create a desire for political union with the United States.

But at the present time Canada does a much larger volume of business annually with the United States than she does with Great Britain yet Canadians have never been accused of disloyalty. A proper people are always a loyal people and we do not need to fear that the removal of the tariff will weaken our loyalty to Great Britain.

The Liberal party have in the past drawn together the bonds of Empire by giving British manufacturers a preference in Canada and will increase that preference. The Conservative party opposed the British preference almost as bitterly as they now oppose reciprocity, yet they now talk loudly of their loyalty to Britain.

Reciprocity with the United States will rapidly enhance the value of our land. The Canadian Pacific Railway Company is advertising in Seattle that the passing of the pact will increase the value of western Canada lands one hundred per cent. This means wealth to every homesteader.

In conclusion, I would say that I am not without parliamentary experience and I would point to my record in the provincial Legislature.

If honored with your support at the polls on Sept. 21st, I shall do everything in my power to further the interests of the electors of Macleod constituency.

If sent to represent you at Ottawa I shall stand for immediate construction of railways for which charters are granted in the federal house as I have done in the provincial house. Be sure to cast your vote on Sept. 21st. A vote at home is useless. Vote for the Liberal party and reciprocity.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
D. WARNOCK.

asked the readers of Le Devoir about Laurier we ask the people of Canada about Bourassa. WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THE MAN?

This is the man, these are the arguments, by which, in Quebec, Laurier's influence is to be destroyed.

To what end? In order that a Government may take office at Ottawa which will be dependent for its life upon Bourassa's support.

The proposition is to make Henry Bourassa, the man who wrote the passage we quote above, the maker and unmaker of Canadian Governments, and the dictator of Canada's Imperial policy.

We put it to the intelligence and to the conscience of every Canadian elector: Can you afford to cast a vote which may dethrone Laurier and put Bourassa in the saddle?—Winnipeg Free Press.

Happenings Around Bellevue

Messrs Christie and Stubbs represented the local union at the Canadian Labor Congress at Calgary last week.

Rev. A. S. Todd B. A., of Blairmore will occupy the pulpit of Bellevue church on Sunday evening next. Mr. Irwin will preach anniversary sermons in Knox Methodist church, Frank.

We are glad to note the progress which is being made by Edward Atkinson who was so seriously injured at the Bellevue church picnic while playing football. His speedy recovery now seems to be an assured fact.

The Bellevue school is now running full blast. Mr. Kelly, the teacher, reports an attendance of 75, mostly primary scholars. The need of larger accommodation is felt and we expect to see a new school building on the way immediately.

An exciting horse race pulled off at Bellevue on Saturday morning when Fred Eddy's horse "Sorby" from North Fork was matched against William Chappel's mare "Queen of the Woods" for a bet of $100.00 a side. As usual the money stayed in Bellevue. Congratulations Bill. This completes the racing season for the Bellevue track for 1911, having won with a record of 9 first prizes and one second in eleven races.

A very quiet wedding was solemnized at the Methodist parsonage on the night of September 7th when Mr. Joseph Henderson Robertson was united in marriage to Miss Nellie Alexandra Laurie of Edinburgh, Scotland. Rev. Mr. Irwin officiated while Clem Stubbs acted as best man and Miss A. Stubbs as bridesmaid. All the boys of the town join in congratulating Joe and in wishing him many years of uninterrupted happiness.

Great excitement reigned at Bellevue on Saturday night when news came that our team had captured the Muttz cup by defeating Michel in a hard-fought battle at Coleman. Those who witnessed the game consider it the event of the season, if not the best exhibition of toying the pig-skin ever put up in the Pass. At full time the score stood 1-1. Two extra quarters were played resulting 2-1 in favor of Bellevue and we carried home the silverware. We are now out for the Crahan cup. Watch us go.

ECZEMA IS CAUSED BY IMPURE BLOOD

CURED BY DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS BECAUSE THEY MAKE PURE BLOOD

Ask any doctor and he will tell you that eczema is caused by impurities in the blood; that nothing can cure it this does not reach the blood—that salves and outward applications are worthless and a waste of money. The reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have always been so successful in curing this most annoying trouble is because they act directly on the blood, reaching the root of the trouble and driving out all impurities. They remove the irritation and itching, give perfect health. Mrs. A. Puling of Milestone, Sask., says: "I was afflicted with a blood and skin disease which the doctor called eczema, but which did not yield in the least to this treatment. I was covered with sores and in very bad shape. A friend advised me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and after using a box I was completely cured. I can strongly recommend the Pills to any one suffering from this trouble."

A medicine that can make new red blood will cure not only skin trouble, but also anaemia, rheumatism, neuralgia, indigestion and a host of other troubles simply because these troubles are the result of bad blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new blood and under their use blood and nerve troubles disappear. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A fruit pie is easily made by rubbing a quart of fruit through a colander and adding a cupful of water as sweet as honey. With this as the emulsion whites of three fresh eggs and freeze, stirring constantly.

Recipe for the Firm—Every farmer and stockholder should have a supply of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil on hand, not only as a ready remedy for the ills in the family, but because it is a safe and reliable medicine of great potency. As a substitute for sweet oil for horses and cattle affected by colic it far surpasses anything that can be administered.

The air of a room may be wonderfully freshened by putting a few drops of oil of lavender into a bowl of boiling water and letting it stand until the water is quite cold.

Sore Throat is no trifling ailment. It may carry disease germs to any part of the body through the food you eat. When you feel sore throat coming on, use Hamlin's Wizard Oil.

A candidate's promise to the people are not any more worthless than the people's promises to a candidate.

MCCARTHY'S RUSE.

How the Lawyer Got Ahead of the Railway Comps. y.

One of the first railways if not the very first built in the old province of Upper Canada was the Northern, now a division of the Grand Trunk, from the city of Toronto to the Georgian Bay at Collingwood. Railway construction was in its infancy and the expense of building was out of all proportion to the amount estimated. Everything the railway owned was mortgaged to the hilt.

The railway made a practice of fighting all claims made against it irrespective of their being just or unjust, but the real difficulty was after a judgment had been obtained against the company an attempt was made to realize the amount by sale under an execution in the sheriff's or bailiff's hand.

One morning there came into the office of Dalton McCarthy of Barrie, then a young lawyer, a letter, from the Township of Lunenburg, named MacNaughton. He said that he had some cattle killed by the Northern Railway Co. The cause of the cattle getting on the company's line was that the company's fence was defective. As the company was legally obliged to keep up the fence there could be little doubt of their liability.

"Mr. McCarthy," said the farmer, "I understand I can get a judgment against the company, but if I can't get the money I don't want to throw good money after bad."

McCarthy looked at his client out of a pair of very piercing grey eyes and said:

"Good morning, I have an idea that I can make the company pay me money, provided we get judgment, but it may be a bitter fight. If I start I don't want to back down."

The farmer agreed and the action was sued in the County Court of the County of Simcoe, and judgment recovered for $175 and costs of suit. Execution was issued in due course and this McCarthy himself carried to the sheriff's office and handed it to the sheriff. When the sheriff received it he said: "Well, McCarthy, I suppose I had better return this now."

"Hold on, sheriff, don't be in a hurry. Who is your best bailiff?"

"Simpson I think, but he is out of town serving jurors."

"When he comes back issue your warrant and send Simpson down to the office."

About the middle of the following week Simpson came down to McCarthy's office.

"Good morning, Mr. McCarthy," the sheriff told me to come down to your office and bring with me the warrant and the writ in writ in MacNaughton vs. the Northern."

"Yes, I want you to get three or four copies of the writ and drive over to Allanvale so as to be there when the train arrives. I shall meet you there."

So McCarthy drove over to Allanvale and waited. When it arrived and before the train had stopped he stepped on board and seized the wood in the tender of the engine, and he and his men piled it on the platform of the station. The engineer grunted good-naturedly and went in and saw the station agent. He was told to back up to the nearest wood pile and refuel the tender. This he did. Again as soon as he arrived at the station the wood was seized by the sheriff's officer and taken out of the tender of the engine. After this had been filled with wood the engine and times the engine went in once more to be the agent and reported that he could not get away from the place without fuel. The agent came out looking red and angry and said:

"How long are you going to keep up this game of hide and seek, Mr. McCarthy?"

"Until the company pays the damages and costs in MacNaughton and the Northern, if it takes all the rest of the season to get the money."

"Well, wait till I hear from Toronto. I have written for instructions."

"All right, sir."

In about an hour a message came direct to McCarthy from the solicitors of the road, undertaking payment of the damages and costs. The train was permitted to go on its way unmolested, and McCarthy had drawn the first blood. He afterwards became a celebrated lawyer and one of the most prominent politicians in the Dominion of Canada.

Looking for Himself.

Pte. Wm. Clifford, who won the King's prize and the Waterloo badge at Biele this year, is a very unassuming man, so much so that he hid in a baggage car on the way from Montreal to Leaside Junction near Toronto, on his homecoming, in order that he might be spared from being the one man of interest on the train. At Peterboro Private Clifford was still in his civilian clothes, and stepping from the train noticed 20 or 30 men running around looking for the crack rifleman, and so he started running with the crowd and hunting all through the cars for the man who had won such distinction. When he was put away from the station, Private Clifford gave up looking for himself and went back to his room at the Leaside Junction that Clifford put on his uniform, and it was not until then that the passengers on the train knew that the Biele prize-winner was on board.

Too Emphatic.

In common with other students, the boys of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, love to print in their college paper some joke concerning the heads of the college. So was probably with much joy that the Guelph students printed in the O.A.C. review for July the following supposed true incident, in which Professor George Creelman figured:

President Creelman (to excursionists who are hanging on the side door)—The other door, if you please, Farmer (somewhat heated)—Go to H—

President—No good. That's not the pass word.—Canadian Courier.

When They Wait.

"A man should follow a determined course regardless of criticism," said McCarthy himself, and to the "Yes," replied Miss Cayenne; "but so many of you are that way only when you wait!"—Washington.

A headache almost always warns you of derangements of the digestive system, the liver, kidneys or bowels. There are at present 415 aboriginal Indians and Eskimos in the Northwest Territory, the remains of a population which only forty years ago numbered over 1,000; and they are the owners of the island which, although only 1,500 acres in extent, had a total trade with the Commonwealth of Australia alone valued in 1908 at £20,000, and which in that year exported one-twentieth of the whole world's supply of phosphate. Probably the island is the only one of the same size exists; I am sure that there is none more curious, and I first visited the place in 1896, any native community. All communication with the outer world was then restricted to the occasional visit of a Sydney steamer, which called in passing to buy shark fins and tails for export to China. The day was long and the sea (for Ocean Island) slight, and I well remember the natives canoeing off in their canoes with bundles of shark fins, and their extreme anxiety to exchange their mud-colored, spotted spears and spears edged with sharks' teeth for glass bottles, which I suppose they shaved themselves and cut their hair.

The men were a fine athletic race, wonderfully clever in managing their outrigger canoes, and with dark in color when compared with the Gilbert Islanders, the result of their constant exposure to the equatorial sun while fishing, clothed with but a scanty kil of grass or pandanus fibre. They spoke the purest Gilbertian, and are beyond question members of that race; their questioning closely resembled that of the Gilbert Islanders, with whom they were well acquainted. Since the current was strong, and it was impossible for us to anchor, the vessel stood "off and on" while the barter of shark fins for "trade" was in progress, and I only landed for a short time at the village of Umu, on the southeast corner of the island, at a spot protected in some extent by a point of the reef upon which an enormous ocean swell was breaking. I little thought as I walked about among the curious natives, followed by a troop of delighted, full-looking clamorous children, that under my feet lay wealth beyond the dreams of avarice, and that in 19 years' time I should again visit the island, to find railways, electric light, wireless telephones, and to see four or five 6,000-ton steamers waiting to carry away the very ground on which I stood. In 1898 the last white man who lived on Ocean Island a relic of some dozen who once dwelt there—had died, and there was no European left. In 1908 there were 80 white employees of the Pacific Phosphate Co., 350 Japanese, and some 500 laborers of the Gilbert and Ellice Islands, besides the 415 aboriginal natives who still survive.

A headache almost always warns you of derangements of the digestive system, the liver, kidneys or bowels. A severe, long-lasting headache, especially when accompanied by dizziness, is a warning of the liver and kidneys. You can stop a headache with powerful drugs. But it is not generally wise to do so.

There are at present 415 aboriginal Indians and Eskimos in the Northwest Territory, the remains of a population which only forty years ago numbered over 1,000; and they are the owners of the island which, although only 1,500 acres in extent, had a total trade with the Commonwealth of Australia alone valued in 1908 at £20,000, and which in that year exported one-twentieth of the whole world's supply of phosphate. Probably the island is the only one of the same size exists; I am sure that there is none more curious, and I first visited the place in 1896, any native community. All communication with the outer world was then restricted to the occasional visit of a Sydney steamer, which called in passing to buy shark fins and tails for export to China. The day was long and the sea (for Ocean Island) slight, and I well remember the natives canoeing off in their canoes with bundles of shark fins, and their extreme anxiety to exchange their mud-colored, spotted spears and spears edged with sharks' teeth for glass bottles, which I suppose they shaved themselves and cut their hair.

The men were a fine athletic race, wonderfully clever in managing their outrigger canoes, and with dark in color when compared with the Gilbert Islanders, the result of their constant exposure to the equatorial sun while fishing, clothed with but a scanty kil of grass or pandanus fibre. They spoke the purest Gilbertian, and are beyond question members of that race; their questioning closely resembled that of the Gilbert Islanders, with whom they were well acquainted. Since the current was strong, and it was impossible for us to anchor, the vessel stood "off and on" while the barter of shark fins for "trade" was in progress, and I only landed for a short time at the village of Umu, on the southeast corner of the island, at a spot protected in some extent by a point of the reef upon which an enormous ocean swell was breaking. I little thought as I walked about among the curious natives, followed by a troop of delighted, full-looking clamorous children, that under my feet lay wealth beyond the dreams of avarice, and that in 19 years' time I should again visit the island, to find railways, electric light, wireless telephones, and to see four or five 6,000-ton steamers waiting to carry away the very ground on which I stood. In 1898 the last white man who lived on Ocean Island a relic of some dozen who once dwelt there—had died, and there was no European left. In 1908 there were 80 white employees of the Pacific Phosphate Co., 350 Japanese, and some 500 laborers of the Gilbert and Ellice Islands, besides the 415 aboriginal natives who still survive.

Baked Potatoes. Doctors assert that baked potatoes are more nutritious than those cooked in any other way and that fried ones are the most difficult to digest.

OCEAN ISLAND.

Facts About a Little-Known Spot In the Northwest Territory.

Ocean Island lies only 52 miles south of the equator, and in full rush of the equatorial current, which streaming across the mid-Pacific from east to west, runs past the island with a varying strength of from one to three miles an hour. From the early years of the last century the island was a well-known calling-place for whaling ships, which came to buy "bogs," and to diversify the monotonous seasons of their year-long cruises. But although these visits were no doubt fairly numerous, says a writer in Blackwood's Magazine, any lengthy stay at the island must always have been impossible, since there is no anchorage at which even a modern full-powered steamer can lie with any degree of safety. Steam must be kept up all the time so as to leave at a moment's notice, even though these vessels are moored to the splendid series of buoys which are now within two cables' length of the reef and in 200

There are at present 415 aboriginal Indians and Eskimos in the Northwest Territory, the remains of a population which only forty years ago numbered over 1,000; and they are the owners of the island which, although only 1,500 acres in extent, had a total trade with the Commonwealth of Australia alone valued in 1908 at £20,000, and which in that year exported one-twentieth of the whole world's supply of phosphate. # THE BLACK DAGGER

A Story of China

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1912

Garland and Harpeth met on the Pacific Island Tropic, and from the first attraction of congenial natures there developed a warm personal liking. Garland was from the state of Maine, and Harpeth was a son of California. Out of 70,000,000 human souls fate had drawn these two, one from the east and the other from the west, to play the principal parts in a strange incident.

They had left the fairy islands of Japan far behind and were drawing near to the dark outline of the China coast.

"Are you going to stop over in Shanghai?" asked Garland, with a touch of Yankee inquisitiveness. "Haven't heard you say."

"There was a little party while Harpeth's eyes sought the rising coast line. "Possibly." He clipped the word rather sharply.

Garland glanced at him curiously. "You know I really didn't mean to pry into your affairs," he said apologetically. "It's rather a natural question for one tourist to ask another."

"Surely, no harm done," returned Harpeth quickly. "How about yourself—going to stop over?"

It was Garland's turn to show embarrassment. The quick look of interrogation he flashed at his companion was met by Harpeth's expression of languid indifference. It was quite plain that Harpeth had asked the question merely to make conversation, not that he cared a rap about the matter.

"Maybe I'll stop over to see the city," said Garland.

Clumny gums came teetering over the sea toward the mouth of the Yangtze, but the Tropic left them far behind as she sailed up to her anchorage off Wusung and landed her eager passengers on to the little transfer tug that would convey them to the tributary river, the Huangpu, to hospitable Shanghai.

In the crowd Garland and Harpeth mingled each other incidentally or by design. Garland could scarcely wait for the tug to make her landing at the jetty before he was off and springing away up the bank toward the hotel of his choice.

The electric lighted hotel, with its air of western civilization, impressed the quiet easterner, impressed the Yankee wanderer most favorably, and he retired to his room and bath, while Harpeth, with a look of surprise, went to the excellent diner that he was sure awaited him below.

But when the meal was concluded and he had enjoyed the gastronomic delights which his fancy had conjured up he retired to the smoking room to pore over a queer little newspaper drawn with brush strokes of India ink on mottled tissue paper.

It was an hour after midnight when he left the hotel and made his way along the bund where a flight of stone steps led down to the river. Here were several sampans moored to the landing, and the coolie sat ready to light for his patronage.

He settled the matter by stepping into one of the little boats, and, being pounced upon by his waiting coolie, he was soon paddled out into the stream, which glistened in the moonlight like molten silver.

"Kaozang! Kaozang!" he cried sharply. "The coolie nodded his head and whirled the sampan about until it headed up stream. For a moment he died steadily with his long sweeps, and then suddenly ran the boat in between high banks on the north shore and grounded in the mud.

As if guided by some invisible hand, he could not recollect ever having touched foot on this soil before, and he found a narrow path winding upward to where a ruffled terrace crouched among a group of distorted wild blown cedars. The moon sent long rays down and here and there pierced the secret places with an illuminating touch. He showed Garland the outline of a dark arched opening, and he made for it.

Just before he reached it he drew from his pocket the little map he had studied earlier in the evening and turned the flash from his pocket light upon it.

Pocketing the map and snatching off the light he held it in his left hand while his right hand groped for a small repeating revolver, which he had studied earlier in the evening and turned the flash from his pocket light upon it.

On either side of the white stone walls there stood out sharply the little black daggers, pointing downward, their land dashed on his lamp and saw a writhing flash of broken stone and a dropping down into a black pit. For an instant he hesitated, then, with a shrug of his shoulders, he stepped forward.

He counted twenty-seven steps in all before his feet touched soft earth. He extinguished his light for an instant and tried to pierce the darkness with his eyes.

Before he snapped on the light again he was started into rigididity by the sound of footsteps treading the path overhead. "They came rapidly with sharp, rattling clicks of leather boot heels on stone. This was the soft padding of feline night slippers; it was the tread of a fearless man wearing European footgear or perhaps American specialties like his own."

Garland moved backward and away from the steps until his back struck sharply against a cold wall. There he stood, a part of the enveloping blackness, while the footsteps stopped at the arched door, and then by the dare of a spluttering candle flamed in the neck of a soda water bottle Garland saw a pair of trousers descend the first few steps. Then as the man came round the candle flame lighted his shirt front and revealed his chin just as a whiff of air from out of nowhere in the partition extinguished the light.

"It is all right," muttered Garland in English, and Garland felt a queer little thrill of relief that the interloper was not a Chinese.

After some fumbling and a final exclamation of disgust because he failed to find another match about his person, the newcomer flung his candle aside and seemed to stop and consider the situation.

Perhaps he heard Garland's carefully controlled breathing, for suddenly he asked, "Who's in there?"

Garland hesitated and then decided not to answer. Perhaps the stranger would go away now that he was without a light. In the meantime he would endeavor to reach his goal by edging along the wall against which he was leaning.

His feet made no sound in the soft earth, and he had made considerable progress when he became conscious of heavy breathing behind him, and he knew that the newcomer was following in his wake.

Garland reached an angle of the wall, followed it around, turned again and once again into a small square recess which had a window slanting upward to some unguessed contrived opening above ground which admitted the moonlight to throw a silver glow over the stone table.

On the stone table was a small shadowy slip perhaps the width of a dagger's blade. Garland stepped forward and reached for it, and as he did so he saw that the faces were in darkness.

"If you've got a light for heaven's sake turn it off!" growled the newcomer impatiently, and Garland, as if it was the most natural thing in the world for him to have met a fellow Englishman, obeyed.

He was here first, ejaculated Garland. "I'm blamed if I don't believe you're following me!"

"You're not here here?" Harpeth put the question hesitatingly.

"Yes, and yours is probably the same," said Garland, with a trace of relief in his tone. "I was so afraid somebody would find out and get the club on me, but somehow it's so confoundingly spooky down here I'm a rival for!" He paused suggestively.

"The black dagger," said Harpeth quietly.

Garland nodded. "I guess you've met with Wah Lung Lo, haven't you? I saw him in Portland."

"And I in Los Angeles," admitted Harpeth. "I'm sure you've got information concerning the black dagger which contained one of the biggest emeralds in the world."

DUAL PURPOSE CATTLE.

Points of Excellence Claimed for the Red Poll.

The Red Polls are the supposed favorite of the farmer, because the bulk of farmers live by diversities. It is often "catch as catch can." Often it is too wet or too dry, too hot or too cold, too much to make the farmer sufficiently for food or reproduction.

Stock the farmer must have for labor, food and fertility. There are successful specialists in farmers, and there are special breeds worthy of all honor bestowed by enthusiasts, but the Red Poll cattle are the best.

Red Poll cattle are advocated especially for their combination milk and meat value, says J. H. Plunk of the Ohio Agricultural College. In England the Red Polls are the best milk producers in milk production than in America. The best Red Poll record in England that the writer is aware of is 12,128 and 12,128 with a record for the year of 11,800 pounds of milk and 1,000 pounds of butter fat. Frankly speaking, Red Poll cattle are not recognized as the equals of either the Shorthorn or Angus in beef production. The Red Poll cow shown here was champion at the Suffolk show in England.

The average farmer is by necessity required to "average up" at the end of the year, and those things that meet his environments best he soon learns are his standbys, writes John E. Hinch in Rural New York.

Therefore we claim the dual cow, and especially the Red Polls are best suited to the conditions on the great majority of farms east, west, north and south. We are proving this every year by records in milk, butter and beef. It has been proved by public test over and over again, both here and in England, that the dual cow often makes first with any competing breed.

The dual cow will often thrive where a single cow would sicken and die. They the Red Polls eat brush, weeds, coarse fodders and damaged overripe hay that would go to waste if fed to the more delicate dairy cow. The elements of the weather and insufficient shelter do not shrink the dual cow to shreds, like the dairy steer, though care and feed are appreciated by these cattle, and profitable returns are often the result of care and proper treatment.

Cows average from 6,000 to 10,000 pounds of milk per year, with butter varying from 10 to 200 pounds annually. Many cows with special care are capable of going far beyond this; but, as a rule, they are supposed to be good for their own living and help keep the family on the wastes of the farm. The dual steer properly handled can give the market side by the best beef brother and is a valuable asset over the dairy steer in the farmer's feed lot. Last but not least, the good mother of the Red Poll, nature has been kind to them and in giving them a beautiful hornless head.

When fattening hogs for market some Colorado experimenters found that a ration consisting of three parts of corn and one part of alfalfa was very satisfactory. For young hogs which were being kept for growth one part of corn and three parts of alfalfa was not better prepared for market. Even when put in the feed lots it is profitable to feed a little alfalfa in connection with the grain. It enables the animal to assimilate the feed, and the feeds that are given for laying on flesh.

Milady's Mirror

Whitening the Skin.

There is nothing better than lemon juice for whitening the skin and making it smooth and soft, but it must never be applied undiluted. It is much too strong.

The best lotion to mix with it when it is to be used on the face is rosewater. To three parts of rosewater add one part of lemon juice and with a soft linen rag dab this all over the face. Then rub it gently into the skin until all the moisture is absorbed.

To obtain the effect you desire you should wash your face thoroughly in tepid water in the morning and then apply some of the lemon juice and rosewater lotion instead of using soap and water for cleansing during the day. Just wipe your face over with the lotion, which you will find quite effective in removing all the dirt and making the skin soft and smooth.

BASEBALL SCORES.

Old Way the Plays Were Recorded Back in the Sixties.

The baseball game of today, accustomed to the minute reporting of games, wherein each run is compounded and many a play analyzed, is often the account of a game played in Syracuse in 1862. The contestants were the Central City of Syracuse and the Athletics of Philadelphia, and the score was 12 to 12.

The game was delayed a half hour by the difficulty in finding an umpire. Then the report goes on to state: "The game opened loosely upon both sides, and at the end of the first inning the score stood Athletics 6, Central City 4, each side making its tally promptly from the loose playing of the out club. After the first inning the Athletics played more carefully, while the Central City crew were careless until the fifth inning, when they became more demoralized than ever. Union army at the battle of Bull Run."

"Considerable dissatisfaction was manifested at the expense, and in two innings rightfully so, at the evident one-sided decisions of the umpire. "We will not participate, but suffer."

Woman's World

The Countess of Warwick, Originator of the Farm School.

Long before Mrs. Belmont of New York thought of exposing the cause of women of establishing a farm school an Englishwoman, the gifted and beautiful Countess of Warwick, organized and opened a college for women horticulturists. In her school dairy work, market gardening, poultry raising, beekeeping and horticulture are all taught. It was established to benefit well bred women thrown on their own resources in earning a living. Capable women teachers are in charge of each branch of the work.

Lady Warwick publishes a paper, the Woman's Agricultural Times, which exploits the work of the school. The Countess also organizes an association of women agricultural workers, known as the Daughters of Ceres. The products of the school, one feature of which is a jam factory, are disposed of for the benefit of the institution, whose preliminary expenses were borne by Lady Warwick. The agricultural college originated in 1888, when the Lady Warwick Hotel was established at Reading, England. Later the school was removed to Studley castle, about fifteen miles from Birmingham.

Gardening has always been a fad with the Countess of Warwick. At Easton Lodge, the magnificent heritage which she brought her husband, she has one of the finest rose gardens in the world. Every known species of rose is said to grow there. Her garden of "Thornhill" is renowned for its roses, and she is often visited by her friends, and each plant on the trees is a masterpiece of art.

Besides plants, Lady Warwick is devoted to dumb animals. Her dogs are always beautiful, and her stable contains the choicest of horseflesh. She rides to hounds regularly when at Warwick castle, her husband's famous seat, and is said to be one of the best horsewomen in England.

Of late years the Countess has been an ardent socialist. Through her efforts the condition of English working women is her ambition to convert to socialism her half sister, the Duchess of Devonshire. The latter, although also of the Earl of Roslyn and the Countess of Westmoreland. In her own right Lady Warwick owns about 28,000 acres of land.

A GERMAN WOMAN'S PRAISE.

She Says American Women Dress Better.

"American women dress better than the women in any country in Europe, even in Paris," says Miss Helen Hanes, a German author now traveling in America.

"In Europe only the wealthy classes dress well, but in America all women do. Clothes are made to order, and there is a perfect good taste. With a one dollar shirt waist and a one dollar skirt they have the style of queens, a style that European women do not get by spending many times that much. They dress their hair beautifully and take good care of their complexion. The latter, although some times more art than nature—are very good. As an average the American women are pretty."

It is not unusual to see a well-dressed woman, while in Germany it is unusual to see one who is well-dressed.

A lady and great admirer of the middle class American woman, she is intelligent, always looks the lady, makes her own clothes, does her housework, and is a splendid housekeeper. The German woman of the same class never looks well-dressed, is always in dressing gowns, dirty and scrubbing, the seldom sees a beautiful woman scrub, but her house is always clean.

"The Paris woman possibly has the better of her American sister on hats and gowns, but the American woman looks better. Only the high society of France can afford these expensive gowns. The average American woman can afford to have a beautiful dress and a beautiful house, consequently the 'maisons' belong to her."

When, after much service, a broom brooms a room on one side than the other and the ends of the broom are in the air, the American woman and she is down quite evenly with the broom. The result will be a broom as agreeable as when new.

Editorial Notes

W-A-R-N-O-C-K.

VOTE FOR DR. WARNOCK
AND LARGER MARKETS.

This week's issue of this paper is being printed a day earlier than usual.

John Herron is amongst the party that is trying to tow down the workmen. Will you vote for him?

Importing free booze in boxes labelled "Choice Tomatoes" is one of the latest actions of the Conservatives. What bright heads? A drink for a vote, what bribery?

It is a pretty bad cause that cannot stand to have the truth told about them. The Conservatives present a pitiful appearance and act like insane beings when the facts are presented.

H. E. Lyon says that this paper is the "mouth-piece of the Liberal party," but he refuses to tell the electors that the "scab" herders are supporting the Conservative party and are getting the "scabs" to vote for John Herron.

H. E. Lyon, the Conservative booster, says that several policemen are stationed at Macleod to be sent out to the mining camps. The police officials say that such is not correct and that there are not enough policemen at Macleod to take charge of that corps. We would just as soon believe the police inspectors as we would Mr. Lyon. However, he may be better acquainted with the police than we are.

Judging by what we read, there seems to be trouble, and serious trouble, in the motherland at present. What between strikes and tie-ups of railways, and shipping, it looks ominous for the future. We can only hope it may be temporary and that matters may settle down in their normal condition, and quietness, peace and good-will reign where a present strife, clamor disorder and confusion are in evidence.

The wisdom and good judgment of the powers that be will surely be brought into requisition and brought to bear upon the combatants in the social strike. Wise diplomacy that can be employed is needed at the present time; and surely if any country has wise and experienced statesmen and legislators that can settle difficulties satisfactorily, and make opposing factions to agree and settle their disputes, Great Britain has. To tell the truth we do not want to see the motherland in the turmoil of a war between capital and labor, between the employers of labor and the masses. We can only hope and pray that peace and order may soon be restored, and that good-will and the best of friendship may be universal. We hope that the present King may show himself worthy of his father, Edward the Peacemaker, in an endeavor to pour oil upon the present troubled waters.

There seems to be a universal unrest all over the world at the present time. There is unrest in the political world. Take for instance, what has been and is going on in England. In Spain and Portugal old-time dynasties have been cast out, and new governments established. Germany is seeking new territory, and looks with jealous eyes on Britain and France. Russia is in an unsettled state.

The masses in that country are seething with revolution and rebellion. Anarchy, communism, Red Republicanism, nihilism, and such like spreading amongst the masses of continental Europe. In Turkey, Persia, India and China there seems to be unrest; an awakening from slumbers of the past into new life; a longing and grasping after better conditions and attainments. The discoveries and inventions in science and arts, the spread and circulation of literature, the education of the masses—all these tend to create this universal unrest. Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased. Then, again, there is an unrest in matters religious.

We have seen that take place in France, Spain and Portugal. But not there alone. There seems to be unrest in religious belief amongst all denunciations of Christians. It looks like a drifting away from the old moorings of former beliefs that our immediate ancestors held sacredly, and going away—where? Creeds and dogmas do not stand for much now.

The old is put by on the shelf, as antiquated and unsuitable to the present age, while there seems to be no particular inclination to accept a new creed or dogma in its place.

Reciprocity And Coal

Perhaps in no other article of commerce will the benefits of reciprocity be more marked than in that of coal is the opinion of the Similkameen Star. Where the States formerly levied a duty of 45 cents on slack coal by the terms of reciprocity is reduced to 15 cents. A very large amount of black coal is shipped across the border United States factories and a still greater trade is expected under the new tariff and the classification of this coal. Thus reciprocity helps but it is in the waiting market for the product of coal that the mines of this province will receive immense benefit. With coke on free list (the United States tariff is now $1.20 per ton) the bituminous mines of British Columbia would more than double their output. The Washington and Montana smelters will welcome our coke with its short haul against the long haul and greater cost of Pennsylvania coke. Only the willful and party blind will not appreciate the benefits to be derived from reciprocity as it affects coal. The bituminous and semi-bituminous mines in Princeton district have all to gain and nothing to lose by reciprocity. If the people of Princeton district as those of Union Bay and Crow's Nest Pass want to see payrolls they will endorse a policy that means the encouragement of the coal and coke industries.

The New Gould Story.

George Gould was making one of his last trips as president of the Missouri Pacific his private car was laid out on a siding for some reason or other, and he got out to stretch his legs. An old Irishman was tapping the wheels. Gould went up to him.
"Morning. How do you like the wheels?"
"Not worth a darn," said the Irishman. "Well, how do you like the car?" "It's good enough for the wheels."
"What do you think of the road?"
"It matches the car."
Gould looked at the chap for a minute. "Maybe you don't know who I am."
"Yes, I do," replied the Irishman. "You're George Gould, and I knew your father when president of the road. And he is going to be president of it again?"
"Why, my father is dead," said Mr. Gould.
"I know that," replied the Irishman, "and the road is going to where he is."—Chicago Tribune.

When a woman in a novel is reduced to circumstances, she cuts her servants down to two. That always makes a country town woman sniff.

A pleasant medicine for children is Mother Graves' Worm Expeller, and there is nothing better for driving worms from the system.

The best political workers say you can't tell from what a man says, what he will do.

All children should be encouraged to use both right and left hands. From inherited peculiarities of brain structure it is nearly always easier for a child to use one hand than the other, hence there should be no scolding for failure.

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer complaints who might have been saved if proper remedies had been used. If attacked, do not delay in getting a bottle of Dr. J. C. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, that never fails to effect a cure. Those who have contracted it are promptly and thoroughly subdued the pain and disease.

The white of an egg mixed with either olive or castor oil makes one of the most soothing and healing applications for a burn.

Salmon, well minced and mixed with yolk of egg and sufficient lemon, pepper and salt to season well, makes a delicious filling for sandwiches. It is equally good with white or brown bread.

"Among us it is unusual to sew up children in woollen underwear for the winter. Not so abroad. And I once heard in Hungary of a case that you will hardly credit."

"A man was arrested for stealing a pig, and they told him that he must take a bath before entering his cell."

"What! Take a bath? The man cried, horrified."

"Yes," said the jailer. "How long is it since you've had a bath?"

"So help me," said the prisoner solemnly, "I never was arrested before - never!"

Comfort For the Dyspeptic - There is no ailment so harassing and exhausting as dyspepsia, which arises from defective action of the stomach and liver, and the victim of it is to be pitted. Yet he can find ready relief in Parmentier's Vegetable Pills, a preparation that has established itself by years of effective use. There are pills that are widely advertised as the greatest of remedies, but not one of them can rank in value with Parmentier's.

When kid gloves show signs of breaking, press the edges close together and apply court plaster on the wrong side. If this is properly done it will have a much better appearance than stitching.

I sometimes think that when a farmer comes to town to serve on the jury, he has a pretty good time. He says it is a public duty he doesn't like, but I rather think he does.

AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS

MAKING SHOT.

Method Employed by William Watts, the Inventor, Still Used.

The lower process of making shot was invented by William Watts, a plumber of Bristol, England, in 1808. His tower was "built" by sawing a square hole in the centre of the various floors of his house, and locating a well in the cellar, into which the globules of molten lead dropped and were instantly cooled and hardened. Watts secured a patent in 1828 and sold his London rights in 1880 for $40,000.

His tower is still in use, although it has been heightened by the addition of several stories. The lead, when molten, is poured into a sieve-like receptacle at the top of the tower, and these molten drops, falling into the well, 100 feet below, form the shot, which is then passed through a polishing-grader. They are then spilt from a hopper on to an inclined plane, the perfect shot running down the plane, while the imperfect drop through an opening between the planes and only the perfect reach the last plane.

A large size than B.B. cannot be made by this process. The large sizes, including shrapnel, are made by the different processes. In the medium size a wire of the proper material is fed into a machine which puns into a ribbon shape and makes it into long ball moulds, which, in cooling, form irregular shot. The various sizes are then placed, each by themselves, in guns, which are revolved for six hours, when the shot come out perfectly smooth spheres.

Marquis as Seaman.

The Marquis of Graham, who next season will be joint master of the newly-formed Eastern Harriers, has had an extraordinary adventurous career considering his years, which number thirty-three. Like Lord Brassey, he wanted to know the real business of sea life, so he shipped as an ordinary sailor, served a full apprenticeship in the mercantile marine, got his master's certificate when he was twenty-one, and was for some time on Lord Brassey's yacht, the Sunbeam.

Lord Graham also did some good service in South Africa, working with the Naval Brigade and Naval Volunteer Service Corps, and acting for a time as press censor in Cape Town. The Marchioness of Graham was Lady Mary Hamilton, and was master of the Hamilton Harriers, and also kept a pack of otter hounds.

She is of royal descent and number one among the Scotch peeresses. In beautiful life of Arden, being left sole heiress of her father, she had wealth when quite a little girl. She had been brought up very simply by her mother, who had a little income and she taught Lady Mary the graces of charity.

One year the little girl had a baby pig given to her, and when it was fully grown she sold it to the butler, distributing the proceeds among the poor people on the estate. After her father's death hundreds of begging letters reached Lady Mary, who was at a loss to understand why people should make their appeals to her. "Mother," she asked, after going through one batch, "do you think they have heard about my pig?"

Rosebery and Epsom.

The Earl of Rosebery, by becoming the Baron of Epsom, has, so to speak, won his own home. Which will please Epsom for not only a new Earl of Midlothian a loyal and active townsmen, but he is a staunch supporter of the sport which is the pride of the place. But it will not be the first time that the familiar primrose and rose hoods have been associated with an Epsom title. In the early summer of 1883 there was a musical play entitled "The Duchess of Epsom Downs." Its hero, made up like Fred Archer, came on the stage just before or just after a race in racing kit, colors and all. That year Bony Dean won the Oaks for Lord Rosebery, and on that Friday evening the Fred Archer of the play made love to the Duchess of Epsom Downs, wearing primrose and rose hoods (it was said to be the identical jacket that Watts had worn in the afternoon), to the great delight of the audience.

Monument to Captain Cook.

Captain Cook was really the first navigator of the Pacific Ocean. Others had discovered it centuries before, but he was the first to put those discoveries to practical use, and his explorations served as a basis for the first accurate maps of that great ocean. He found that there was no vast continent stretching from near the shores of Asia to the Antarctic pole, as Europe had always thought. He was the first to explore New Zealand, and he gave New South Wales its name. He is at last to have a fitting monument on the shores of England and the world. This memorial will take the form of a statue to be placed by the Admiralty near the Admiralty arch in the Mall.

VISITS TO IRELAND.

Laughable Adventures of Royalty in the Emerald Isle. The visit of the King and Queen to Ireland which evoked scenes of the greatest enthusiasm in the green island, for Ireland is not disloyal, as King George discovered for himself in 1867, when he went to that country as the special representative of his grandmother on the occasion of her Diamond Jubilee. Now he has entered Ireland as King of England and Ireland; the second visit to the Emerald Isle since 1824.

The visit of King Edward shortly after his accession to the throne was one of the most successful any monarch ever paid. Received with extraordinary enthusiasm, His Majesty won the hearts of all by his graciousness and tact.

One or two humorous incidents illumined the series of state functions and festivities. Thus, owing to a mistake on the part of a member of the royal suite, a small shopkeeper was presented the honor of receiving the honor of knighthood.

The individual in question was duly dressed in his robes before the discovery of the mistake was made, and everybody in the know wondered what would happen when the King learned that his latest knight owned a tiny shop in Kingstown behind the counter of which he served in person. But death solved the problem.

It may have been due to the excitement of the unexpected honor, but whatever it was, the knight died suddenly within forty-eight hours of the ceremony.

Later on in the tour, when the King was in the south of Ireland, he attended a royal demonstration at which it was proposed to present Queen Alexandra with a magnificent bouquet.

The little four-year-old daughter of a local magnate was given the honor of making the presentation, and for that purpose was led on to the platform where their Majesties, surrounded by a brilliant staff, awaited the child.

When she arrived, somewhat breathless, and looked round for the great personage who was to have her lovely bouquet, the tiny tot saw a gentleman dressed in the conventional frock coat and silk hat and some quietly dressed ladies. To her, these seemed of no importance, for on all sides there were men wearing magnificent uniforms and cocked hats with waving plumes.

She quickly decided that the most magnificent-looking of them all - a certain distinguished general in the service of the royal army - was wearing his full uniform - was most deserving of the bouquet, so without hesitating an instant she toddled off to him and handed him the flowers.

The general blushed from sheer embarrassment, but the child never discovered her mistake, for with a smile the Queen took the child's hand and said a few gracious words to her, quickly putting everybody at ease.

Passing Off a Tie.

The last scene of the fashionable life of the Count d'Orsay as told in Mr. Trollope's novel, "The Gilded Age," is a study of his biography of him.

Just before the dinner hour a party of five presented himself at the Count's house with a dish, and he, so he said by the confectioner. Having this in the kitchen, he deliberately walked upstairs to the count's dressing room.

Well, who's that? asked d'Orsay. It was a sheriff's officer. "Really?" exclaimed d'Orsay and demanded that he should be permitted to complete the tying of his tie. "Salon or prison, his tie must be perfect."

"But, count!" "Bah, bah! All in good time." The officer was quite interested in the tying of that tie. Few men had been so honored as to be allowed to see how d'Orsay tied his tie, and, by the time the tie was tied the sheriff had sunk to rest and d'Orsay was free to tell his story.

"John," said d'Orsay, calmly walking up to the drawing-room, "kick this chap out of the door."

The which was executed, and the writ was not.

Elephants Killed by Rats.

In 1868 three of Hagenbeck's elephants, just brought from Africa, were attacked by rats, which, through the wooden floor on which they (the elephants) stood and gnawed the animals' feet, all three died, no doubt from fright rather than from pain. Mr. Robinson, in quoting this story as "the most dreadful" apparently in his collection of anecdotes of elephants attacked by puny enemies seems to be unaware that the same thing has happened in England. The first chronicled instance, we believe, belongs not to Regent's Park Zoological Gardens, but Clifton, and has been duly recorded by Frank Buckland. But there has been trouble in the London Gardens before now with rats attacking the large animals; the old hippopotamus Guy Fawkes was one of the sufferers. - London Spectator.

The Blairmore branch of the Crow's Nest Pass Hardware moved the greater part of its stock to the head store at Frank last week and vacated the building occupied by them at Blairmore for over two years. Louis Dutil, proprietor of the Blairmore Hardware Co., has taken over that part of the Frayer & Sinclair building formerly occupied by the C. N. P. H. Co. and moved from Mar One store this week to his new place of business. Mr. Dutil will have sufficient room in his new place to carry a large and assorted stock and will no doubt endeavor to maintain the good name which his firm has so well earned.

The Blairmore Band

Amongst the many things which Blairmore has to its credit is the town band. About five months ago a movement was made to organize a band. The initial attempt was most gratifying and upwards of thirty men, with strong musical inclinations formed the band and immediately procured the necessary instruments. The players have recently given a few exhibitions of their master skill in the open-air and a crowd of satisfied listeners have always greeted the players whenever they have appeared in public. We believe that the town council should erect a band stand in some prominent place in town and give the band a yearly contribution of about $150 to play twice a week whenever the weather would permit.

"Just as the Conservative party has succeeded in fighting its way into some degree of favor with the country, and reaching a point where victory may possibly be achieved, along comes Mr. George Taylor, former chief Conservative whip, with an ill-considered remark in the House of Commons that 'it would be better for the Government to drive the strikers to work at the point of the bayonet.'"

It is just blithering blather, like this blundering ass, who keep the Conservative party on the bum. This outrageous remark will be used with fatal effect by the Grits at the ensuing elections. The labor element on the prod is no joke when seats have to be won."

"I want to say to you, and you cannot say it is biased by political opinion, for I have never voted for the present Government, if it had not been for the magnanimous consideration and assistance given to us by the Minister of Labor and by the Dominion Government, the organization of which I am a member would have been annihilated on the G. ## Blairmore Won in Lawn Tennis

Blairmore became the victors in a series of tennis games played in their new courts at the west end of Blairmore, on Saturday afternoon last. The games played were as follows: Men's doubles, won by J. H. Farmer and R. W. Coulthard, of Blairmore; Ladies' doubles, won by Mesdames J. H. Farmer and J. R. Smith, of Blairmore; Men's singles, won by J. A. McLeod, of Frank; Ladies' singles, won by Miss D. Westwood, of Coleman; and mixed doubles, won by Mrs. R. W. Coulthard and Rev. A. S. Todd, of Blairmore. This gave Blairmore three games out of a total of five. The other games went one each to Coleman and Frank. H. G. Bigelow acted as umpire and one of his decisions in a game played by the married ladies against single ladies was somewhat disputed and a commotion of an amusing nature ensued.

Big Day for the Young Folk

The Church of England will give a Sunday School picnic in Blairmore on Wednesday afternoon next when children from Coleman, Frank and other towns in The Pass will be in attendance. The picnicers will meet on the grounds at the north-west portion of Blairmore at 1.30 p.m. The children from Coleman will arrive on the noon train and may return about 7 p.m. Older people will be seen amongst the young folk and a pleasant afternoon is in store.

Women's Suffrage

The regular weekly meeting of the Guild was held in the Presbyterian church on Monday evening last. The meeting was in charge of the devotional committee. The next regular meeting to be held on Monday evening next will take the form of a debate: "Resolved That Women Should be Given the Franchise." The meeting will be in the hands of the literary committee. The affirmative will be led by R. W. Earl who will be assisted by Miss Cogland, while J. G. Smith will lead in the negative, and will be assisted by Mrs. J. F. Laik.

Conservatives Distribute Lots of Free Booze

A Liberal meeting was held in the Blairmore opera house on Saturday evening last. There were over two hundred present, including several Conservative booze fighters who acted more like young, ignorant, unruly children than men of advanced age. It was plain that shortly before the meeting commenced some of the Conservatives distributed a considerable quantity of free drinks amongst their friends and persuaded those drunks to attend the Liberal meeting and to make it unpleasant for the advocates of Liberalism.

C. F. Harris and Harvey Murphy defended the Liberal cause and plainly showed many weak points in the Conservative party. H. E. Lyon spoke on behalf of the long lost Conservative party and begged the voters present to elect John Herron once more.

The Yukon election will take place on October 23rd, with nomination on September 26th. It will likely result in an acclamation for F. T. Congdon, Liberal.
